PUBLIC COMMENT

Public comment is an important part of the decision-making process. It provides an opportunity for you to share your thoughts and concerns with the decision-makers. Your input is valued and will be taken into account.

Commenting on public comment allows you to provide additional information, clarify your previous comments, or respond to other commenters. This is a chance to ensure that all relevant information is considered.

Opinions expressed in public comment are not binding on the decision-makers. However, they provide valuable insights and perspectives that can influence the final decision.

Participating in public comment is a key way to ensure that your voice is heard and your values are reflected in the final outcome.

Montana Model or Texas Model?

The North American Model of Wildlife Conservation, what some are calling the "Montana Model" of Wildlife Conservation is under attack by privatizers, what Roosevelt called, "selfish men or greedy interests".

"I recognize the right and duty of this generation to develop and use the natural resources of our land; but I do not recognize the right to waste them, or to rob, by wasteful use, the generations that come after us." - President Theodore Roosevelt

"This hunting tradition and the conservation ethic within that tradition covered a lot of ground before it got to us.

It passed through the hands of people both humble and great, simple and profound.

This legacy did not come to our generation to die.

To keep it alive, we must learn the stories, we must appreciate their significance, we must teach each successive generation how this heritage was delivered into our custody."
